Tonello develops ozone washes

Italian company Tonello has come up with new denim technologies. The ozone washing system is capable of creating a pure indigo look with greater contrast on the seams while saving up to 80 per cent in terms of water, energy and time. In many cases it is possible to avoid stone-wash processes, making the working environment completely safe and healthy, while obtaining even better results.

The ozone is placed inside a washing machine and dissolved in water to remove the indigo during washing. This makes it possible to reduce both the number of baths and the treatment time, obtaining a bright, contrasted bleach effect. The ozone is also completely neutralised in the machine, allowing the operator to handle the garments without risk.

Tonello does special effects on fabrics, experiments with new techniques for washing garments and is known for stunning graphic designs. The company started out by producing just washing machines for the home market, but soon, the Italian company decided to diversify. Tonello stands for the highest quality standards not only for washing, but also for dyeing and finishing.

Tonello is participating at the ongoing Bangladesh Denim Expo from November 11 to 12. Bangladesh is one of its main markets.
